The Rose - Garden Husband

By MARGARET WIDDEMER

Illustrated. $1.00 Net.

Boston Transcript:

"The beauty and the strangeness that go to make romance are combined in the little tale of 'The Rose Garden Husband.' The reader . . . becomes immediately interested in the personality of the gay little 'Liberty Teacher' who realizes that no one wants to hear the 'cry-side.' . . . It is the manner in which the author tells her story and the charm she infuses into her heroine that make it such delightful reading."

The Dusty Road

By THERESE TYLER

Frontispiece. $1.25 Net.

Philadelphia Press:

"A tale of amatory misfortunes with a happy ending. It has been written as a trenchant criticism of the aimlessness of smart society, and it is all the more effective because of its frequently vitriolic quality. Pre-eminently calculated to provoke a storm of discussion. That it has already achieved this is abundantly demonstrated by the fact that it has promptly become a 'best seller.'"

A SIREN OF THE SNOWS

By Stanley Shaw

With Frontispiece by Douglas Duer

How an alert young Secret Service man, torn between love and duty, helped to thwart a colossal conspiracy of international importance that involved an ex-premier of Canada and a disgruntled United States millionaire, is unfolded in Stanley Shaw's first novel—a story so ingenious and enthralling that it compares with E. Phillips Oppenheim at his best. It is a breathless kind of a novel of love and intrigue with a punch in every page.

Here is the original again, after a silence of ten years, and nothing greater can be said in praise of it than that it is told with all the original cunning of Doyle's pen—and several new "stunts" which, these ten years, have been ripening in the master author's brain, till now they splendidly appear in a book which promises to be the

A History of Travel in America

By Mr. SEYMOUR DUNBAR

With 2 maps, 12 colored plates, and 400 illustrations reproduced from early engravings, contemporary drawings, documents, and broadsides. Four octavo volumes, cloth, 1,600 pages, $10.00 net.

A History of Travel in America is a history of the development of travel and transportation from the canoe and dog-sled to the highly organized railway systems of the present day. And it is more. For the statement of this evolution involves the delineation of social and economic conditions. Method of travel at any time, it is evident, represents the state of development of society in which it appears, and at the same time serves most effectively to improve that state. The educational effect of travel alone makes it a most powerful agent for betterment. The appreciation of this mutual reaction served to give Mr. Dunbar his point of view.

So it may be said that A History of Travel in America is a social and economic history of the American people in which the successive methods of travel are shown to be among the strongest factors for change that have helped to bring about our way of life to-day.

Mr. Dunbar has used a mass of hitherto unknown material of importance about the Middle West, Far West, pioneer life, and governmental dealings with the Indians. From his point of view he traces national progress from the early colonial period to the completion of the first Trans-continental Railway, and provides a narrative of extraordinary interest and power.

The many illustrations and color plates, which are photographic reproductions of rare early prints, drawings, broadsides, documents, and manuscripts were nearly all previously unknown to students; and the story of pioneer conditions which they tell is astounding.

The breadth of conception and quality of performance are noteworthy features of the work; and to many it will prove literally more fascinating than tales of a master of romance as it traces the travel of the American people from the scattered, avaricious, and mutually jealous communities to a condition of real social nationality.

CONGRESS AND BUSINESS.

CONGRESS adjourned this week, leaving undone some things that were expected, some that were hoped, and some that were feared. The President's attitude on the Ship Purchase bill, which was not supported by the public opinion that has so largely appreciated his wisdom in dealing with war conditions and his energy in pushing measures which did commend themselves to the country, had the effect of blocking the wheels of legislation some days during a critical part of the session, and it was only by unceasing and vigorous work at reckless speed that the danger and discomforts of an extra session were avoided.

It is reasonable to hope that with the legislative program as to business evils completed and the Trade Commission made ready for action, the trend of the administration and of Congress will now be toward relieving the business world from undue restriction instead of hampering it by uncertain conditions. The recess of Congress will give time and breathing space toward this end. Undoubtedly there were many evils to be corrected for which governmental control through legislation was the only effective remedy. While the remedy was not worse than the disease it is nevertheless the fact that in the course of remedial legislation there had been some anti-toxins administered which had proved harmful to the business system. There has in fact been a radical tendency on the part of some members of Congress to run amuck against property rights in general, even to the extent of interfering by legislation with the protections that the courts have reasonably and rightfully given to other than physical property. An example of this was the favorable report by the Patents Committee of the Ogilvie amendment to the copyright law, which had nothing to do with copyright and which would have virtually offset the protection given by the courts against misleading competition beyond the copyright period. Had there been any chance of passage for the bill, it is known that a minority report would have been made and the amendment been strenuously fought by the other members of the Patents Committee, but a motion to strike the bill from the calendar prevailed and in the next Congress the chances of such a bill will, we trust, be diminished.

On the other hand, no progress was made toward the proposal shaped in the Metz bill, and in other forms, making it possible to maintain net prices without danger of conflict with the Sherman and other Anti-trust laws. Such a measure, which is of importance to the book-trade, should and, we believe, will ultimately be adopted. The best example of the need and wisdom of freeing business from uncertainty on this point is found in the Ford automobile, which has been developed greatly to the public interest, on the solid business lines of making a uniform fixed price; this has permitted the steady reduction of that price from year to year, which could not have been done under any other system. The Fair Trade organization in which the Ingersoll watch people, who have developed their business on similar lines, are leading spirits, is working steadfastly in this direction and its ultimate success will greatly strengthen the book-trade, whose enduring prosperity should be on the same lines.

Another example is the need of legislation on the lines of the Post Office administration bill, but without its complexity of detail, which will give the post-office a business organization under the supervision of a non-partisan permanent Director. Postal administration is developed into a bureaucracy, mingling despotism, interference with business, and petty detail in such wise as exist no where else, even in Germany with its bureaucratic administration of public industries, or in Russia with its pervading despotism. It should be one of the triumphs of President Wilson's administration to rid the country of this pettiness of administrative method, evident also in the treasury department, which has become nothing short of a business curse.

We hope that when the next Congress meets, in December of this year, it may be under such normal circumstances that some of these important measures may have adequate attention.

A NOVEL temperance law which promises some unusual complications was recently passed by the Alabama legislature over the Governor's veto. It prohibits newspapers published in the state from printing liquor advertisements and the circulation within the state of periodicals printed outside the state containing such advertisements. It also prohibits all other forms of liquor advertising, but the enforcement of the periodical advertising provision will offer the greatest practical difficulties. It seems probable that direct mail subscriptions do not fall within the purview of this state act; but resales of periodicals by newsdealers or booksellers do. We understand that at present Alabama newsdealers are literally "censoring" out all offending advertising in the periodicals they handle, and that a test case is being prepared to bring the matter into the courts. From the temperance standpoint the law is certainly a clever attack on "the enemy."

ENCOURAGING in these days of retrenchment, real or imaginary, is the news that the Funk & Wagnalls Company last week made a profit-sharing distribution by which every employee of a year's standing received a cash bonus of ten per cent. of his year's salary or wages. This distribution took the place this year of the informal annual "family reckoning" which has been a Funk & Wagnalls feature. The size of this concern's business may be gauged from the fact that the 10 per cent. bonus amounted to nearly $30,000.

KIPLING COLLECTION TO BE SOLD.

The Anderson Auction Company announces the sale on March 17 of the valuable Rudyard Kipling collection made by G. M. Williamson of Piermont, N. Y. Mr. Williamson gathered all the rare first editions with which collectors generally are familiar.

"The Smith Administration," published at Allahabad (1891), is perhaps the rarest of the Kipling first editions. The "Horsmonden School Budget," the school magazine published in 1899, contains a letter on school etiquette written by Kipling at the request of the young editors, and a reproduction of the caricature of Kipling by Max Beerbohm. Mr. Williamson also obtained the original manuscript of Kipling's contribution and the original drawing of Beerbohm's caricature.

Ignoring "Schoolboy Lyrics," "Echoes," and "Quartette," all of which are in this collection, Kipling calls "Departmental Ditties" his first work. Mr. Williamson collected three copies of the first edition of the "Ditties," and one of them contains an inscription by Kipling. The various Calcutta and London editions are also included in this sale.

NOTES FROM PARIS.

Special correspondence to the English "Bookseller" and the New York "Publishers' Weekly."

THE great French writer whose name—or rather whose pseudonym—I have feloniously misappropriated, says, in one of his amusing letters from England, "The necessity of saying something, the perplexity of having nothing to say, and a desire of being witty are three circumstances which alone are capable of making even the greatest writer ridiculous." A fortiori the absurdity would be even greater on the part of a very small writer, though the causes remain the same. A journalist must write occasionally, or dwell in dark oblivion of the public's needs—to say nothing of his own—and acquire an aptitude for making bricks without straw which would have earned him a foremanship at the building of the Pyramids, but that will avail him little in "the perplexity of having nothing to say" of which Voltaire speaks.

That Paris is getting to be somewhat of her old self again is obvious to anyone who has lived in the city throughout the six months of the war. In the early days of August three shops out of five were closed in some of the poorer quarters, and though the proportion was not so high in the main thoroughfares, there were far too many shutters down even there. The Morris columns which, inside, contain scavengers' implements and outside are pasted over with playbills, were covered with tricolored paper, and reserved for the announcements of the military authorities—who did not use them, by the way. Cafés and restaurants closed at a time when the pleasure-seeker was beginning his evening, and social intercourse was hampered by the absence of omnibuses and the early closing of the "Metro." To visit a friend in a distant quarter of the city meant a long walk through unlighted streets, with no chance of refreshment, and the probability of getting run over by an automobile, but that was preferable to being in the "taxi-auto" when it tried to torpedo a street-refuge.

Now, however, a considerable change has been wrought. The great majority of the closed shops have re-opened; the Morris columns are once more clothed in their parti-colored garb of theatrical posters; the streets, though not brilliantly illuminated, are no longer in Cimmerian darkness; and the last train on the Metro. does not start before you have finished dinner, but at the more reasonable hour of 11 p. m. In short, Paris is getting to be somewhat of her old self, but in a more purified and chastened frame of mind.

But though business generally has recovered in a marvellous manner, Literature and the Fine Arts are still in a parlous state. It will be necessary—unless peace should arrive within the next few weeks—to abandon all idea of holding the annual Salon, for all the young painters are in the trenches, and it would be absurd as well as unfair to expose nothing but the works of those artists who are too old or are physically incapable of going to the front. On the other hand, one sanguine, not to say sanguinary, journalist proposes that only the works of men in the fighting line should be exhibited. This is a patriotic notion, quite according to French ideas, but seems hardly practicable. Painting a picture with "Black Marias" dropping in what a comic verse writer calls "adjacent proximity," is not a condition in which an artist could do himself justice. The only subjects possible would be military ones, and a Salon made up exclusively of alarums, excursions, trumpets, and advances would be monotonous.

Literature is quite in as bad, if not a worse, condition. Authors, publishers, compositors, and readers are in the trenches, and not a single book that is not unconnected with some aspect of the war has issued from the Paris presses during the last six months. Of war-books, indeed, there is no dearth, though not such a plethora as in England, I believe. They are, without exception, unsatisfactory, for so much secrecy has been observed as to the movements of troops, battles, etc., that we get no account of events till two months or more after they have occurred, which is galling to the day-by-day historian.

In the same category may be placed the schemes of retired military men for the apportionment of Germany, when we have conquered it. In most of these schemes, Great Britain is allotted a goodly slice of the German loaf. "It is no good gift," as an old chess professional I knew used to say when an amateur pounced down on his seemingly unprotected queen. It is hardly conceivable that the British nation would consent to govern any part of Germany. Some of these books were even published before the war began, and were open to the objection that it was something like selling the bear's hide before the hunt began.

War-novels have also begun to appear—not in volume form, but as serials in the newspapers, but of these, and the other war-stuff, I do not propose to make any criticism, firstly because you are sufficiently afflicted in England with that kind of printed matter, and secondly because I have not perused any of them myself, and do not intend to until their is a Presidential decree enforcing their perusal under penalties. I hope that the rumor which has reached me that three of the leading publishers have agreed that they will not bring out any war-literature is true. Would that the others would follow their example, but of that I fear there is little chance. Rather do I dread the prophecy of an experienced critic, who when asked what was the outlook for the autumn publishing season, replied, "I fully expect that many new books will be published, but they will be nothing but newspaper articles altered and touched up."

A DISPLAY OF LITTLE, BROWN'S NEW NOVEL, "AMARILLY,"

The surmise is probably correct, but the prospect is not enlivening!

K. VOLTAIRE.

"I wonder what has become of the old-fashioned dime novel?" remarked the old foggy. "It has gone up to a dollar and a half," replied the grouch."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MATTHEW BENDER & COMPANY.
AN OLD LAW PUBLISHING HOUSE, RECENTLY
INCORPORATED AND IN A NEW BUILDING.

THE incorporation, on January 12, 1915, of the law-publishing firm of Matthew Bender & Company makes it of interest to recall some of the history of law-book publishing in Albany, especially as this city has always ranked among the foremost centers of the United States in this particular line of industry.

In 1887, Mr. Matthew Bender, Sr., severed his connection with the old firm of William Gould & Sons and started in business for himself, issuing his first book, "Fiero on Special Proceedings." The first office was in two rooms on the third floor of the old Museum Building (now the site of the Albany Trust Company), at the corner of State and Broadway. The business soon outgrew these quarters, and was moved to the second floor of the Douw Building, 36 State Street. He remained there for two years, and then moved to 511 and 513 Broadway.

In 1905 he formed a copartnership with his two sons, Matthew Bender, Jr., and John T. Bender, under the firm name of Matthew Bender & Company. The first of this year the business was incorporated, the officers being the three members of the old firm: Matthew Bender, president; Matthew Bender, Jr., vice-president; John T. Bender, treasurer; Fred W. Platt, secretary. In January of this year, Matthew Bender & Company moved into their new stone building, "on two streets, under one roof," which they have erected at 109 State Street and 76 Maiden Lane. It runs from street to street, and is one of the most attractive business structures on the main approach to the State Capitol. This location has an especial interest as the home of a law-publishing house, since it was on this site in the basement of the original building that Benjamin F. Butler and John C. Spencer spent many busy months compiling the first edition of the important New York Revised Statutes issued in 1829. This work was a successful attempt to bring the whole common law of England and all the existing colonial and State statutes affecting our commonwealth into a complete and systematic code, based upon scientific principles, and sufficient for all the needs of government.

At one time Albany was the chief law-book center of the United States, no other city ever having so many independent law-publishing houses in active operation at the same time. The following houses were widely engaged then in more or less friendly rivalry: William Gould & Sons, Banks & Bros., W. C. Little & Co., Weed, Parsons and Co., H. B. Parsons, James B. Lyon, Matthew Bender. Though, necessarily, the law-publishing business has developed in other cities, still Albany is to-day one of the three greatest law-book centers in the country.

Stephen Gould was the first law-book publisher in the United States, doing business in New York City in 1790. Shortly afterward, William Gould, a near relative, opened the first law-book store in Albany at 104 State Street. As was the old-time custom, he lived in the upper part of the house. The store was open in the evening, and was the resort of lawyers from all over the State.

Subsequently, in 1804, William Gould took into business with him his cousin, Anthony Gould, his nephew, William Gould, and his brother-in-law, David Banks, under the firm name of Gould, Banks & Co., with stores in both Albany and New York City. About 1857, the senior Goulds, William and Anthony, having died, the firm was dissolved, David Banks, Sr., and William Gould, the nephew, retiring. A new firm of Banks & Brothers was organized, the business continuing at 104 State Street until 1846, when it was moved to 473 Broadway.

About 1859, William Gould, the nephew, started in business for himself at 56 State Street, where Keeler's restaurant is now, subsequently moving to 68 State Street, where the business was afterwards continued by his sons until 1890, when the firm went out of business, and the publications and stock were taken over by Banks & Bros. The copartnership of Banks & Bros. was dissolved in 1895 the New York City interest continuing as the Banks Law Publishing Co., and the Albany business continuing as Banks & Company. After the death of A. Bleecker Banks, the business of Banks & Company in 1911 was disposed of, and reorganized with David Banks as president, Matthew Bender, Jr., as vice-president, L. K. Strouse as treasurer, and John T. Bender as secretary. The business was then moved to 911 and 913 Broadway, the warehouse of Matthew Bender & Company.

When the old firm of Weed, Parsons & Co. went out of business, their law publications were taken over by H. B. Parsons. About eight years ago his business was purchased by, and is now merged with, Matthew Bender & Company.

An idea of the growth of Matthew Bender & Company is furnished by the fact that whereas at first the publications of the house averaged but two a year, now a publication of some kind is issued from the press of Matthew Bender & Company every two weeks.

IN the case of Bureau of National Literature v. Sells et al (District Court, W. D., Washington, N. D., March 3, 1914, 211 F. R. 379), the complainant asked for an injunction and for $50,000 damages because defendant was overhauling and selling as new second-hand sets of a copyrighted work, "Messages and Papers of the Presidents," published by the complainant. The defendant, Sells, moved to dismiss the bill, contending that the bill did not state a cause of action for infringement of copyright; that, although there was stated a cause of action for unfair competition, the court had no jurisdiction, for the reason that the amount in dispute was not over $3000. It was contended that in an action in equity for unfair competition, damages may not be recovered, and that the amount in dispute is therefore not over $3000; no value of the injunction being alleged.

The court held, in part, that: Plaintiff can claim no exclusive right to the sale of "second-hand sets." Its exclusive right to the sale of a particular copy is gone when it parts with the title to such copy. It is only, therefore, when the defendant sells his goods, the re-stored copies, as and for the plaintiff's goods, the new and original copies, that the defendant is guilty of unfair competition. If the defendant had actually sold and delivered copies to which the plaintiff still retained titles, this would constitute an infringement. But the defendant did not possess such copies and could not sell or deliver them. The fact that he took orders to sell new books and filled such orders by delivery of old books, would not constitute a sale of new books. The fraudulent representation and palming off of the goods of the defendant would constitute unfair competition, but not infringement of plaintiff's copyright.

The case could not be definitely settled, because, the bill did not allege the value of the injunction as exceeding $3000, the amount required to secure Federal jurisdiction. However, the court ruled that it did not follow that it must dismiss the bill because the value of the injunction was not alleged to exceed $3000. Plaintiff was allowed to move to amend its bill in this respect, with the provision that upon failure to do same within ten days bill would be dismissed.

MATERIAL FROM COMMON SOURCES MAY BE COPYRIGHTED IF ARRANGED IN NEW WAY.

BOTH the Chautauqua School of Nursing and the National School of Nursing put out, some time ago, printed lectures in a correspondence course on nursing. One of the latter's lectures was practically identical with one of the former's. The original sources of information were the same, but it appeared that the author of the National School's lecture had complainant's lecture in his possession at the time he was writing for the defendant. The court (District Court, W. D., New York, January 27, 1914, 211 F. R., 1014) held that, although the complainant did not originate the method described in the lecture, and although the subject matter was drawn from a common source, yet it could be protected by copyright under the rule that a copyright may be claimed where the author has taken material from common sources if he has arranged and combined it in a new way.

The court held that infringement appeared, though there were differences in the phrasing of the material and some differences in style. A decree was granted the complainant, the Chautauqua School of Nursing, with costs, but without damages.

THEATRICAL SCENE, POSSESSING LITERARY QUALITY, MAY BE PROTECTED.

IN the case of Chappell & Co., Ltd., et al v. Fields et al (Circuit Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, January 13, 1914, 210 F. R., 864), a preliminary injunction was granted the complainants on the ground that while the voice, motions, and postures of actors and mere stage business may be imitated, because they have no literary quality and cannot be copyrighted, yet a theatrical scene possessing literary quality may be copyrighted. In the case in question, a scene in the defendants' play contained substantially the same dramatic incidents as a distinctly original scene in complainants' play. Besides claiming the originality of their scene, the defendants claimed that Chappell & Co., Ltd., being a subject of the King of England, was not entitled to the protection of our law. On this last point, since the act of March 4, 1909, confers on aliens rights under United States copyrights when the state or country of which he is a citizen or subject grants similar rights to United States citizens, the court held that where the President issued a proclamation stating that citizens of Great Britain were entitled to the benefit of the United States copyright laws, such proclamation was a conclusive determination that the laws of Great Britain permitted United States citizens reciprocal copyright privileges, and the courts were bound to presume that such conditions continued to exist until a different proclamation was made.

The court also made the point that preliminary injunctions are granted more readily in dramatic than in other cases, because the delay involved in waiting for a final decree would generally amount to a denial of justice.

RETURN OF IMPOUNDED ALLEGED INFRINGING ARTICLES.

A TECHNICALITY of copyright procedure came up in the District Court of the Northern District of Ohio, W. D., on February 28, 1913 (206 F. R., 362), when the Crown Feature Film Co. and the Royal Feature Film Co. sued the Bettis Amusement Co. and Will C. Bettis, and the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. sued Will Bettis and the Western Exhibitors' Feature Film Co., the cases being argued jointly. The court was asked to consider in each case a motion for an order to show cause why films seized by the marshal, pursuant to paragraph C, section 25, of the copyright act of March 4, 1909, and the rules of the Supreme Court for practice and procedure under said section, should not be returned, and also demurrers to the complaints.

The court decided that it could not entertain a motion to show cause why articles impounded as alleged infringements of a copyright, under the act of 1909, should not be returned unless a showing was made by affidavit, as required by rules 9, 10 and 11, adopted by the Supreme Court, that the articles seized are not infringing copies or means for making the copies alleged to infringe. As defendants had failed to comply with this provision, but, on the contrary, had filed affidavits that the films seized were original positives, made from original negatives, they had destroyed their chance of invoking the benefit of rules 9, 10 and 11. The demurrers in each case were overruled and the defendants allowed to have exceptions to the action of the court respecting both motions and demurrers.

CHANGE OF TITLE DOES NOT INVALIDATE COPYRIGHT.

COLLIER v. IMP. FILMS Co., a case tried in the District Court, Southern District of New York, on January 28, 1913 (214 F. R., 272), involved a point of general copyright interest. Defendant's demurrer claimed that the complainant was not entitled to restrain the infringement of a dramatic composition, "A White Slave's Love," because the author, after taking out such copyright, adopted a new title, "The Undertow," and thereafter assigned the work to the complainant, who produced it under the latter name.

Judge Noyes, in his decision, stated that: "There would be force in this contention if it appeared that the defendant had acted without notice. I am not satisfied that an author can copyright a play under one title, produce it under another, and hold as an infringer a person who has been misled by his action. But I am not called upon to determine that question, as it does not arise upon these pleadings. The bill avers that the defendant produced the complainant's work with full knowledge of all the facts. As to such a person, I think it clear that an author or his assignee does not forfeit a copyright by a change of title of the work. I also think that the use of the work by the defendant is sufficiently averred."

*ADDITION OF AN ALTO TO WELL-KNOWN
TUNE DOES NOT ENTITLE TO NEW COPYRIGHT.*

A BILL raising the shadowy question of what constitutes a "substantially new and original work" came before the District Court, Northern District, of Georgia, on May 16, 1914 (213 F. R., 871), when W. M. Cooper sued J. S. James, claiming the infringement of what was alleged to be a copyright for the revising, improving, and remodeling of a book. This book, a song book, "The Sacred Harp," was issued at least as far back as 1869. All copyrights had expired prior to 1902, when Cooper issued a book called "The Sacred Harp." The greater part of his improvement was preparing altos to the songs, which before were in but three parts. Cooper claimed that James issued in 1911 a book in which he used the altos of Cooper's 1902 volume, which was alleged to be copyrighted, and thereby infringed his, Cooper's, copyright.

The defendant moved to dismiss, claiming that: The alto claimed to be infringed was no infringement, for no alto to a tune already having the other three parts is copyrightable, and this was all complainant claimed defendant did. He did not claim that defendant infringed on any tunes in his book that were not in "The Sacred Harp" in 1869, and the books attested this fact.

The court upheld this motion, holding that "the addition of an alto to a well-known tune is not such a 'substantially new and original work' as entitles the person adding such alto to a copyright." The case was dismissed.

FRANK T. BULLEN, the English writer of sea tales died at Madeira on March 1st in his fifty-ninth year. Fifteen years of adventure on all the seven seas were turned into some of the most thrilling tales ever written when finally Bullen picked up his pen and decided to become an author. He was forty years old, and the salary he received as clerk in the Meteorological Office in London was not sufficient to provide for a large and steadily increasing family. Driven to literature to ward off starvation, Bullen uncovered unsuspected literary power. Except for reading the Bible from cover to cover twenty-five times while on long voyages, he was practically without education. He attended school until he was nine years old, and then ran away. For three years he lived the life of a street Arab in London, and finally he shipped as a cabin boy. The first four years of his sea life he incorporated in "The Log of a Sea Waif." By that time he was old enough to ship as a seaman, and one long voyage followed another until he joined the crew of a South Sea whaler and fell in the way of the adventures recounted in "The Cruise of the Cachalot." Bullen was chief mate in 1884 when he retired from the sea to become junior clerk in the Meteorological Office. He wrote the following: "The Cruise of the Cachalot"; "Idylls of the Sea"; "The Log of the Sea Waif"; "The Men of the Merchant Service"; "With Christ at Sea"; "A Sack of Shakings"; "The Apostles of the South-East"; "Deep Sea Plunderings"; "A Whaleman's Wife"; "Sea-Wrack"; "Sea Puritans"; "Creatures of the Sea"; "Back to Sunny Seas"; "A Son of the Sea"; "Our Heritage the Sea"; "Frank Brown, Sea Apprentice"; "The Call of the Deep"; "Advance Australia"; "Confessions of a Tradesman"; "Young Nemesis"; "The Seed of the Righteous"; "Beyond, Cut Off from the World"; "A Compleat Sea Cook"; and many other stories, articles, and essays.

ON MARCH 12th the John Lane Co. will put forth "Lost Sheep" by Vere Shortt, a novel dealing with those "little brown people of the desert," the Senussi, whom the Kaiser is said to have tried recently to inveigle into the "Holy War" against Egypt. On March 5th Lane published "A Pilgrim's Script," a rambling, thoroughly interesting-looking account of several years' experiences around Ninevah, Damascus and various out-of-the-way places in Asia Minor and the Eastern Sudan. The author, R. Campbell Thompson, spent many years in archaeological work in the east as representative of the British Museum; the present volume is not, however, a record of dry-as-dust discoveries, but a rich glimpse of the land and its people.

THE PENN PUBLISHING Co. regret their inability to fill all orders for "Contrary Mary." The advance sale so far exceeded their expectation that the first edition was far over sold and they were obliged to go to press with a large second edition ten days before the day of publication. The second edition was ready the latter part of this week. This in turn has been exhausted and a third large edition will be ready on March 15th. The time limit for the receipt of the reviews for the "Contrary Mary" $100 contest has been extended to March 31st. The five cash prizes of $50, $20, $15, $10 and $5 respectively will be distributed to the winners on April 10th. A copy of the book will be sent free to anyone actually engaged in selling fiction, and the reviews must not exceed 500 words in length.

STEVENSON'S first two books, "The Inland Voyage," and "Travels With a Donkey," were complete failures, according to a note in the March Bookman. After they had been out about three years his publishers notified him that it was impossible to sell even single copies and that they were about to dispose of the plates as old metal. Stevenson borrowed a small sum of money from his father and with it bought in the plates and the copyright. At the present time these two books yield hundreds of dollars in yearly royalties. There are no figures to indicate the returns accruing from "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." The book rights of "Treasure Island" were sold for one hundred pounds, but there was an agreement by which he received additional royalties, after a certain sale had been reached.

THE WILL OF SIMON BRENTANO disposes of an estate valued at $1,000,000. Half of the estate is given without restriction, except in certain minor requests, to the widow, Mrs. Fredericka Brentano, who is made executrix. The other half is divided into three shares, each of the three minor children to have one share. Mr. Brentano made the request that his two sons, Lowell, nineteen, and August, fifteen, enter the business of which he had been the head as soon as they are old enough, and that they continue with the firm until they are certain they are not adapted to that kind of business. They are requested not to withdraw their interest from the business. Each son is to obtain his share when he is twenty-five years old. Mrs. Brentano is asked not to dispose of her interest in the business unless circumstances make it necessary.

Among the publishers who have exhibits at the exposition are Paul Elder, the Encyclopedia Britannica Co., the Master Mind Publishing Co., the Grolier Society, and the Methodist Book Concern. In addition to these, there will be exhibits of books by various foreign countries.

THE "DEUTSCHER LITERATURKATALOG, 1914-1915," published by F. Volckmer and L. Staackmann, Leipzig, is ready. This compact volume of 1868 pages, with an additional 238 pages of index, gives in alphabetical order a selected but widely comprehensive list of all important books, calendars, maps and music in active demand in Germany to-day. Despite its being what we should call a jobber's catalogue, it should prove a useful reference list for libraries and importers of German books. The four divisions of the catalogue include books, calendars, atlases, compilations, maps, etc.; foreign literature, English, French, Italian, and Spanish; music, including also opera librettos and musical instruments; and a general subject and title index. There are also a number of individual publishers' lists of books on philosophy, science, etc. Besides the author and title of each work is given the publisher, his address, the weight, binding, retail price, in cloth and in paper, and the individual telegraphic code word. School books and 1914 works are especially designated. G. E. Stechert & Co. are the American agents for the catalogue.

Two young Englishmen, Douglas Gordon and Harry Tod, visiting in Holland at the outbreak of the present war, endeavored to reach home by means of a friend's yacht. They were pursued by German ships, threatened by mines, had a mutinous German sailor to deal with, and were in many ways deterred in their projects. One of two drowning men rescued by the crew of the yacht turned out to be the Kaiser, and after his recovery things became very lively on the little yacht. The astuteness of a young American passenger was effectual in foiling some of the Emperor's deep-laid schemes.

Breagh had made an apparent failure of life, because of an expected fortune. A good friend sent him to the war as a special correspondent. On a deserted battlefield he met Juliette, looking for her father's body. Juliette was exposed to many dangers, one of the greatest, the schemes of her unscrupulous mother. P. C. Breagh was able to save the young French girl, but for a long time he believes her married, as a marriage had been previously arranged. A genius with more than a touch of insanity finds a way into the Fourth Dimension, where lies a world planned much like our own, but without human inhabitants. This world he proceeds to colonize. The sociological aspects of "Marjorieland" are amusing; whether by accident or design, all members of the working class were excluded from that county, with the exception of one who had to be evicted.

Scene is laid in Shanghai. A woman is about to leave her husband for another man whom she visits. To them in succession come a former lover and the husband, both with a shrewd idea of her intentions. Cholera, developed by a Chinese servant, quarantines the four under one roof. The chalk line is drawn around the property to denote the boundary beyond which it is forbidden to venture. An "emotional complex" ensues, for the woman, seeing the queer situation in a number of varying lights, cannot decide what she really wants.

Prince Henry of Prussia procured in 1909 for author the position of governess in a German princely house. Her prince and princess insisted on regarding her as American, not English, because her grandfather had been an admiral in the United States Navy. The Kaiser, the Crown Prince, General von Bernhardt, the Krupps, Count Zeppelin, General von Kluck, Herr Dernburg, and important secret-service people, all came under her observation. She tells frankly what she saw and heard, naming names, concealing only the identity of her employers.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in FEBRUARY, 1915

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

WAR FICTION - ILLUMINATING AND ENTERTAINING

"Pierre Mille has caught something of Kipling's spirit without sacrificing in any way the French feeling," says the New York Sun of

UNDER THE TRICOLOUR

By PIERRE MILLE. Being the authorized translation by Berengère Drillien of "Barnavaux et Quelques Femmes." With eight illustrations in color by Helen McKie. 12mo. Cloth. $1.25 net.

The translation of these famous French stories should be particularly welcome at this time. Pierre Mille in this book may be said to have done for the French Piou-Piou what Kipling did for the British "Tommy." His hero is Barnavaux, a splendid and lovable ragamuffin in the Colonial Infantry. The stories are original works of art. All are striking in different ways. For directness and restraint, for marvelously skilful economy of language, the story of Marie-faute-en-Fer, especially, seems worthy of comparison with the work of the greatest of French short-story writers. At a moment when the French "Tommy" is the subject of so much interest and admiration in our eyes, Barnavaux should receive a particularly warm welcome, but it would be his due in any case.

THE KAISER CAPTURED!

AN EMPEROR IN THE DOCK

By W. DEVEER, author of "Battle Royal." 12mo. Cloth. $1.25 net.

A Dutchman's yacht, having as passengers two young Englishmen and an American, pursued by a German cruiser; the explosion of a warship by a mine; the Emperor saved from a watery grave, and, subsequently, anarchy on board the yacht; such are the ingredients of this thrilling and timely tale of adventure.

LONDON INVADED!

WHEN WILLIAM CAME

A Story of London Under the Hohenzollerns. By H. H. MUNRO. 12mo. Cloth. $1.25 net.

A prophetic novel of the conquest of England by the Germans. London becomes a city with German and English equal languages. The Jews dominate it, but a discontent among the younger generation shows a hope that in time the English will defeat the Germans and again rule their own land. A plausible, ingenious and particularly timely story.

LIFE IN THE FRENCH FOREIGN LEGION

READY MARCH 12

LOST SHEEP

By VERE SHORTT. 12mo. Cloth. $1.25 net.

A novel this, but one that makes contact with the present war on at least half a dozen interesting, some of them vital, points, and has something decidedly worth saying on every one. The book is mainly concerned with the Senussi, that mysterious religious sect inhabiting the oases of the desert, which is of special interest to us just now from the efforts made by the Kaiser to induce their Sheik to take part in the "Holy War" and invade Egypt.

THIRD EDITION

The Novel the Kaiser Read Aloud

THE IRON YEAR

By WALTER BLOEM. Authorized translation by Stella Bloch. 12mo. Cloth. $1.25 net.

This remarkable novel depicts in vivid word-painting the final struggle between France and Germany in the year 1870. The book created an extraordinary sensation in Germany, where more than twenty editions have been exhausted. The German Emperor read it aloud to the members of his Royal Family circle.

SECOND EDITION

The Novel the Kaiser Suppressed

LIFE in a GARRISON TOWN

By EX-LIEUTENANT BILSE. New popular edition. 12mo. Cloth. $1.00 net.

The suppressed exposure of German Militarism, for the publication of which the author underwent court-martial and imprisonment in a fortress. This remarkable book provides in novel form a scathing indictment and exposure of the character and training of the Prussian officer.
